

Our Principles

- Inclusiveness dropping knowledge is an open public resource that welcomes everyone, regardless of age, race, ethnicity, religion, nationality, gender or class.
- Sustainability dropping knowledge will expand the reach and access of its web platform and other activities, and foster solution-driven change by inspiring new initiatives and partnerships among individuals, NGOs and corporations.
- Copyleft dropping knowledge abides by a Copyleft principle of distribution. All content donated to dropping knowledge is freely available to all for all time.
- Public Ownership dropping knowledge is an open-source platform with 100% stakeholder perspective. It cannot be owned by any organization, corporation or individual; it belongs to the people of the world.
- Transparency dropping knowledge commits to full transparency and disclosure, informing its community of the way it spends its donated resources.

About dropping knowledge

A non-profit initiative, dropping knowledge operates as an international non-governmental organization supporting social change. Using advanced web technology the initiative links the voices of individuals and organizations. Through multimedia-based campaigns and events dropping knowledge functions as a social amplifier, offers uncensored knowledge and invites to take responsible action within an international network. A project of the Tides Center its Founding Supporters are the Mark & Sharon Bloome Foundation and the Wallace Global Fund.
